The German-Italian Relations in a New Europe

The so-called 'Brexit' and the rising 'Europe-Criticism' as well as a number of foreign policy issues of the European Union show the state of the European Union. In this situation collaboration - even in the form of an enhanced cooperation as set out in Artt. 20 TEU and 326 TFEU - can play an important role and take over a leading position in the European economic, political, cultural and legal development. The workshop investigates possibilities of an increasing German-Italian cooperation, to become such an 'enhanced cooperation' that serves to foster sustainable European development, cohesion and welfare.

About the Organizers

Laura Ammannati holds the Jean Monnet Chair in European Energy Regulation and Policy. She is full Professor of Economic Law at the University of Milan. Her core research fields are regulation and competition in the network industry sector (energy and transport) and, more recently, the governance of global financial markets.

Dieter Krimphove is professor of European Business Law at the University of Paderborn, Jean Monnet Professor 'ad personam' and Visiting Professor at the Danube University Krems and the University of Strasbourg. His research focus is on German and European banking and competition law.

Maria Grazia Melchionni has been Professor of History of International Relations and Jean Monnet Professor of History and Politics of European Integration at the Faculty of Economics of Sapienza Università di Roma. She has been Visiting Professor at various reputable universities in Europe and over. She is the Editor of the international journal Rivista di Studi Politici Internazionali since 2006.
